

11th Wing Safety Vision

RYAN A.F. CROWLEY
Colonel, USAF
Commander

You are our most important asset, and your safety is an essential priority for Chief Lawton and me. All Joint personnel need to know the risks associated with their given tasks and have the tools and procedures to eliminate or mitigate those risks to the lowest level possible, and where risk still exists, decisions to proceed need to be made at the appropriate level to those risks.

All members of the 11th Wing, our mission partners, and contractors across the National Capital Region have a critical role in promoting a positive safety culture rooted in the fundamentals of risk management. No task justifies compromising the safety and health of our personnel. If it looks different or dangerous, step back and assess the true risks involved in the activity. If you see a problem, speak up and bring it to the attention of the on-scene supervisor and chain of command. If, for some reason, this is not possible, anyone can anonymously identify a problem through the Airmen Safety Action Program at <https://asap.safety.af.mil>.
